Gabby Aranda-Pino, MPH

Sexual & Reproductive Health Supervisor
Public Health Madison & Dane County
Madison, WI

Gabby Aranda-Pino is extremely passionate about sexual and reproductive health/women's health and is the new Sexual and Reproductive Health (SRH) Supervisor for Public Health Madison & Dane County. She got her Master's in Public Health from George Washington University with a focus on SRH/women's health and obtained her Bachelor's degree in Biology and Gender and Women's Studies (GWS) with a certificate in Integrated Studies of Science, Engineering, and Society from UW-Madison. She started out as pre-med to pursue her original goal of becoming an OB/GYN, but after being exposed to the world of GWS and public health, decided to shift her career trajectory into the public health sphere. She has an extensive background in health equity and reproductive justice from a variety of different areas ranging from the legal field to the legislature and non-profit advocacy work. While in undergrad, she started a non-profit organization, For All Women, on campus at UW to raise awareness about barriers and inequities that marginalized women face in accessing gynecological and reproductive health services. During her time running this organization she partnered with Share the Health, a free local gynecology clinic open once a month, to help them run monthly clinics and raise money for their mission.

Gabby was born and raised in Madison as a first-generation Venezuelan American with Spanish being her first language. She lives with her partner, Kyle, and two dogs, Rufo and Olive on the westside of Madison. She is thrilled to be a part of the Wisconsin Women's Council to address inequities and barriers that women and girls face throughout the state of Wisconsin and hopes to work to improve access to healthcare services and reproductive justice.
