

Robert Carrington

Putting People First

Roberta Carrington is an enrolled member Stockbridge-Munsee Community. She is an Emergency Medical Technician, recognized for saving lives. She is also a community activist and change agent.

Roberta is instrumental in processes to ensure programs and services remain current and relevant for the people they are intended to serve. For example, if a program isn't working as intended, Roberta helps create changes so it does. She also works to ensure people get their services in the way they want to be served. Program updates that keep people at the forefront can ignite community change that can be transformative for the people being served and providers who want to deliver the best programs and services to clients.

How does she do this? In addition to getting to know her community as an EMT, Roberta is a member of the Stockbridge-Munsee Health, Housing, and Child Protection Boards, and was elected to the Head Start Policy Council, and the Education Board. She uses her speaking and writing skills to elevate her ability to be an effective, present, and caring advocate.

Roberta shows us how one person can use their time, talents, and passion to be an advocate and create transformational change.
